CO-OPERATING MARKETING MEASURE

BILL COMES UP IN DECEMBER BEFORE TERM OF CONGRESS

Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, It Is Reported, Is Working Out the Details of a New Agricultural Marketing Measure, With a $300,000,000 Fund To Be Loaned To Farmers, But It Is Not known Whether It Has Coolidge's Sanction —The McNary-Haugen Bill Will Come Up Again This Term.

After a summer of silence, President Coolidge is disclosing to his friends that he is giving the question of a sound agricultural relief policy his close attention in anticipation of recommendations to be made to the next congress.

There are as yet no indications regarding the president's views, except a belief held by those who have discussed the problem with him that he is as determinedly opposed as ever to the equalization fee principle of the McNary-Haugen bill which he vetoed last winter.

With spokesmen of some farm organizations still insisting that this provision again will be demanded next winter, it appears that the way to a compromise has not yet been found, but it is believed in many quarters that some sort of conciliation will be effected.

The viewpoint from which the president has watched developments in the farm relief situation is not apparent, nor is there any indication whether his summer in the west gave him any new opinions in the matter.

Secretary Jardine has been credited with working out the details of a new cooperative marketing measure, with a $300,000,000 fund to be loaned to farmers and cooperatives, but whether such a measure is being formulated under encouragement from Coolidge has not been disclosed.

The president is watching, however the progress of various groups which are studying the farm relief question and his himself disclosed to Chester H. Grey, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation, that the administration has begun an investigation as to what course should be pursued.

The president was told by Gray, whose organization has been one of the most ardent supporters of the McNary-Haugen plan, that the fight for this measure would be carried forward next winter along substantially the same lines as it was last session.

There will be a disposition to accept changes, however, Gray added, but the principle of controlling crops and permitting the crops to pay their own expenses, which, in substance, is the equalization fee principle, will be demanded without quarter.

Changes which the McNary-Haugen supporters will accept, Coolidge has been told, will be a reduction of the revolving fund from $300,000,000 to perhaps $225,000,000; selection by the president of the federal farm board, the same as any federal board is chosen, instead of from a list of candidates nominated by representatives of the farmers, and increase or reduction of the number of commodities to be affected or the application of the proposed measure to only one or two crops as an experiment.

Some of the president's advisers believe he may soon make public his farm relief plan for the winter, in view of his recent inclination to discuss the subject. Others consider it unlikely that any comprehensive idea of what he has in mind will be gained until he sends his annual message to congress.

In the meantime, numerous farm organizations, have notified Coolidge that they are canvassing the whole situation. Representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange and the Farmers' Union will meet in Washington November 9, when an attempt will be made to reach an agreement to press for enactment of a farm relief bill next winter. Heretofore the Grange and the Farm Bureau have not agreed on the McNary-Haugen bill.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From Wires By Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

Dover—Residents of Dover were divided into two camps today on the question of Sunday movies. Sentiment in the subject was crystallized by the order yesterday of Mayor P. J. Groh forbidding theaters to open. George Chrest, owner of two of Dover's three movies, after trying to show pictures yesterday in the second attempt in two years to introduce Sunday movies in Tuscarawas county, surrendered to Groh's demand.

Toledo — Two men were dead Monday, one the victim of a hit-and-run motorist, and several other persons were recovering from injuries received in a series of auto accidents over the weekend.

Pomeroy — Ground was broken today for the new fireproof building in which the Democrat, a weekly newspaper will be published. The plant of this newspaper was destroyed in the fire which swept away two city blocks in the heart of the business district recently.

Toledo — The district court of appeals today overruled the appeal of Ben Rudner, who was found guilty of second degree murder in connection with the death of Don R. Mellett, Canton editor.

Nelsonville — Many coal miners who for months have been working in other fields and in other trades, are returning to their homes hopeful that the Hocking Valley will sign up on the Jacksonville scale as have Illinois and Indiana mine owners.

Dayton — Police are searching for a former employee of the Dayton Country club, suspected of setting fire to the barn there several weeks ago. Sixty-five prize horses were lost.

Piqua — Thomas H. Callahan, 40, Piqua, was killed instantly in a hunting accident at Manistiquie, Michigan.

BOUGHT OLD LIVERY BARN — George T. Myers, the concrete contractor, has purchased the old Albaugh company barn from the Standard Oil company and is moving it to Edison avenue opposite the office of the Circleville Lumber company.

Mr. Myers will erect a garage for storing his trucks and plant machinery.

Fly's Frugality

"The philosopher who told us to 'go to the ant' for our lesson in frugality, should have said, 'Go to the fly.'" "But the fly is not a frugal insect." "Yes, it is. Why they simply swarm into the cheap eating houses."

KARL C. WARD DIES ENROUTE TO CALIFORNIA

At St. Elmo, Illinois --His Mother, Mrs. F. M. Ward Lives On Mill Street.

Word was received in this city by Mrs. Nannie O. Ward, of East Mill street, of the death of her son, Karl Clare Ward, who passed away on his way to California.

He was accompanied by his wife and was enroute to the Golden State for the benefit of his health. He took ill at St. Elmo, Illinois, and died Friday, October 7.

He was the guest of his mother here several weeks ago. He was born in Walnut township and was fifty years of age and was a son of the late F. M. and Mrs. Nannie Oesthimer Ward.

He was twice married. His first wife was Miss Aurel Marvin, of Bucyrus and his second who survives was Miss Jessie Charles, of Chicago. Two sons are living, Marvin and Floyd Ward, of Chicago.

Of his immediate family there are living his mother, Mrs. Nannie O. Ward, of this city; one sister and five brothers. They are Mrs. T. O. Williams, of Detroit, Michigan; Glen D. Ward, of Cleveland; Bonner Ward, of St. Louis, Missouri; Ormand C. Ward and Kenneth D. Ward, of Cuyahoga Falls, and Rupert O. Ward, of this city.

The deceased was a member of the Masonic order. His remains were taken to Chicago for burial.

GUN BATTLE POLICE AND HOLDUP MAN

Patrolman Andrew Ridilla, of Cleveland, was recovering Monday in an emergency clinic hospital from the effects of three bullet wounds received Saturday night in a gun battle with a holdup man. Ridilla has a bullet in his left lung, arm and right leg.

The victim of the shooting was George Billings, who was escaping from a holdup of the Commodore theater, when Ridilla set out in pursuit. The pair met in a narrow drive way near an undertaking establishment a few squares from the theater where they shot it out.

Ridilla was wounded first, but he gamely returned the fire of the cornered robber. Billings staggered to a nearby house where he fell dead in a chair.

Miss Hazel Mougey was a visitor in Columbus today.

HOME FROM HOSPITAL.

Mrs. Gilbert S. Monroe, accompanied by a nurse and her husband, were guests of Mrs. C. A. Patton and Mrs. E. L. Tolbert Sunday, enroute from Battle Creek, Michigan, to their home in Portsmouth. Mrs. Monroe recently underwent an operation for gallstones and the shock resulting from the operation, nearly made her a nervous wreck, and she has been taking treatment at Battle Creek ever since.

DESERTED ARRESTED

Walter Ellsworth Ginn, a deserter from the U. S. army, who was recently placed under arrest, was delivered to Ft. Hayes Saturday by Deputy Sheriff John Ward. Ginn is the man who stole the Wallace bakery bicycle and is also the man who taught Harry Shaw how to forge checks. The latter is now in the Boys' Industrial School, Lancaster.

HONORED BY LAWYERS

Mrs. Olive G. Ricker of Chicago, who was elected executive secretary of the American Bar association.

If, as the supreme court says, contempt of congress is a crime, how does Mr. Dawes keep out of jail?

Will Provides Meals, Dentist for Horses

London.—The horses of the late Henry Ruffer of Ludbrook Grove, London, a director of the Royal Insurance company, are going to have an easy time of it. By the will of their late owner, none of them may be sold and the trustees are directed to set aside a sufficient sum each year for 21 years to keep the horses until they die of old age.

If the horses are sent to a farm, Mr. Ruffer specified, arrangements are to be made to provide them with "two good feeds of corn per day, in addition to ample grazing" and the grooms are to see that the horses' "shoes shall be taken off and that their teeth shall receive proper attention and be examined not less than twice a year."

EQUIPMENT OF THE HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT

Will Be Painted a Bright Yellow To Lessen the Danger of Accidents.

To lessen danger of accidents, all state highway equipment will be painted a light yellow to add visibility, State Highway Director Schlesinger announced Saturday. This plan he said, is in conjunction with the safety campaign now being carried on thruout the state by the Ohio State Automobile association.

With more than 3000 separate equipment units being operated on the 10,000 miles of state highways, it is important that every reasonable precaution be taken to prevent accidents, Director Schlesinger said. The state owned equipment consists of motor trucks, tractors, power shovels, compressors, concrete mixers, graders and snow plows.

These machines, used solely to maintain state roads, must necessarily be traveling on or stationed along highways during working hours.

The light yellow color, which was adopted by the American Association of State Highway officials as being the most striking, is now used on all highway warning signs. The battle-ship gray, now used on highway equipment, is not clearly visible at a distance, and does not attract attention of motorists to the fact the vehicle may be standing still.

"The equipment is easily recognized as belonging to the state; rust shows up readily thru the light color and indicates the necessity of repainting; stolen units are more easily recognized and found, and, finally, it is the most striking warning color that can be obtained."

G. S. RENICK REMOVES TO WASHINGTON

HOME OF ADAMS TO BE MADE SHRINE

Historic Structure Is to Be Opened to Public.

Quincy, Mass.—America is soon to have another national shrine, the historic old Adams home with its wide grounds, old trees and old fashioned gardens, beloved of two Presidents of the United States and their distinguished descendants.

Although the old home is to remain in the ownership of the Adams family, as it has since the very early days of the republic, the grandchildren of Charles Francis Adams have decided to give up the house to the public and it will be opened soon as a national shrine.

Tradition has it that Abigail Adams sat down on the horse block before the house and cried when she saw that the house was not large enough for the new furniture she had bought in France. That was why John Adams, the second President of the United States, added some rooms to the original structure, built in 1732 by Leonard Vassall, a San Domingo planter.

Vassall was a Loyalist and he fled the country at the time of the Revolution. The new American government bought the house and John Adams in turn bought it from the government.

Five generations of the Adams family were rocked in the cradle that is still in the house. In the wing chair that stands in the study upstairs the President died a year after his son, John Quincy Adams, had been inaugurated President.

In the stone library which Charles Francis Adams built in the garden in 1872, is the desk at which John Quincy Adams died in the house of representatives in Washington.

In addition to the furniture brought from France by Abigail Adams, are two chairs of Dolly Madison's that came from the White House. There is the old sofa on which President John Adams sat at 90 to be painted by Stuart.

There is a bed that was obtained from Daniel Webster for a bad debt. This is in the middle room in which Lafayette once slept.

The house always has been lived in and the passing years have seen each generation of the noted American family add to its heritage.

DISPUTE STORY THAT EVE ATE THE APPLE

Washington, Oct. 14.—(UP.)—Cold science struck at the Garden of Eden apple theory today.

It knocked the apple right off the "tree of knowledge of good and evil" and tentatively substituted an orange—or a banana—as the fruit that caused the downfall of Adam and Eve.

Science in this case was exemplified by agricultural department horticultural experts, who declare Eden was so hot an apple could not have grown within 1,000 miles of it.

A bulletin issued by the department's Hawaii station advances the banana version. It says this fruit is one of the oldest known and quotes a legend that the serpent hid in a bunch of bananas and tempted Eve.

But the experts are not exactly sure what the snake told Eve to eat. Dr. H. T. Gould, assistant horticulture chief, has an idea an orange was the "forbidden fruit." Genesis does not specify the nature of the fruit.

Dr. Gould asserts that oranges were plentiful in the region of the three rivers, Arabia, where Eden supposedly was, and that the Biblical first man and woman probably never saw an apple.

The dispute has aspects fully as deep as the question, "Is there a Santa Claus?"

William Atherton Deputy, writer of children's school books, says he thinks it is wrong to "mislead" young minds with the apple story if the banana or orange was more correct. He is going to change the story in the next series of books he writes. The work of salvaging the plane. It was brought near to the tanker—and then came the final tragedy.

As it was being salvaged in the tossing seas, a tank of gasoline exploded. In a moment the plane, which had carried the two so far, was burning, and before their eyes it was destroyed.

The rugged fare of a "tramp" oil tanker, was shared with Miss Elder and Haldeman and they were given rest.

The plane lost, there was nothing to do but go on and the Barendrecht headed towards Horta, chief port of the Azores Islands.

Captain Goos, Friday, informed the ship's owners at Amsterdam that he would land Miss Elder and Haldeman at Horta, early Saturday. Plans are being made at Horta to put the couple on the steamer Lima, which will take them to Lisbon on Sunday.

That is the story told by the radio.

FARM LAND VALUES STILL DECREASING

Average Is 50 Per Cent Lower Than in 1920.

Washington.—Farm real estate values continued to tumble during the crop year just ended, marking a continual depreciation during the last seven years, the Department of Agriculture said recently, adding that there are plenty of farms for sale with buyers few and cautious.

Present values are about at the level of 1917 values, being placed at 119 per cent of the prewar level, while 1920 values were 169 per cent above the prewar figure. The decline in the last year was not to be wholly unexpected, according to the department, on account of the marked decrease during the year in the price of certain of our major farm products, the sharp drop in farmers' incomes, and a generally inactive farm real estate market.

The South Atlantic states showed the largest decline, being 137 compared with 148 in 1926, and 198 in 1920. In other state divisions values were:

East North Central, 103 against 110 in 1926 and 159 in 1920; West North Central, 115 against 121 and 184; East South Central, 133 against 139 and 159; West South Central, 139 against 144 and 177; Middle Atlantic, 111 against 113 and 136; Mountain, 101 against 103 and 151; New England, 127 against 128 and 140, and Pacific, 143 against 144 and 156.

Values for the United States as a whole have gone down 50 points, from 169 in 1920 to 119 in 1927.

HOME OF ADAMS TO BE MADE SHRINE

Historic Structure Is to Be Opened to Public.

Quincy, Mass.—America is soon to have another national shrine, the historic old Adams home with its wide grounds, old trees and old fashioned garden, beloved of two Presidents of the United States and their distinguished descendants.

Although the old home is to remain in the ownership of the Adams family, as it has since the very early days of the republic, the grandchildren of Charles Francis Adams have decided to give up the house to the public and it will be opened soon as a national shrine.

Tradition has it that Abigail Adams sat down on the horse block before the house and cried when she saw that the house was not large enough for the new furniture she had bought in France. That was why John Adams, the second President of the United States, added some rooms to the original structure, built in 1732 by Leonard Vassall, a San Domingo planter.

Vassall was a Loyalist and he fled the country at the time of the Revolution. The new American government bought the house and John Adams in turn bought it from the government.

Five generations of the Adams family were rocked in the cradle that is still in the house. In the wing chair that stands in the study upstairs the President died a year after his son, John Quincy Adams, had been inaugurated President.

In the stone library which Charles Francis Adams built in the garden in 1872, is the desk at which John Quincy Adams died in the house of representatives in Washington.

In addition to the furniture brought from France by Abigail Adams, are two chairs of Dolly Madison's that came from the White House. There is the old sofa on which President John Adams sat at 90 to be painted by Stuart.

There is a bed that was obtained from Daniel Webster for a bad debt. This is in the middle room in which Lafayette once slept.

The house always has been lived in and the passing years have seen each generation of the noted American family add to its heritage.

DISPUTE STORY THAT EVE ATE THE APPLE

Washington, Oct. 14.—(UP.)—Cold science struck at the Garden of Eden apple theory today.

It knocked the apple right off the "tree of knowledge of good and evil" and tentatively substituted an orange—or a banana—as the fruit that caused the downfall of Adam and Eve.

Science in this case was exemplified by agricultural department horticultural experts, who declare Eden was so hot an apple could not have grown within 1,000 miles of it.

A bulletin issued by the department's Hawaii station advances the banana version. It says this fruit is one of the oldest known and quotes a legend that the serpent hid in a bunch of bananas and tempted Eve.

But the experts are not exactly sure what the snake told Eve to eat. Dr. H. T. Gould, assistant horticulture chief, has an idea an orange was the "forbidden fruit." Genesis does not specify the nature of the fruit.

Dr. Gould asserts that oranges were plentiful in the region of the three rivers, Arabia, where Eden supposedly was, and that the Biblical first man and woman probably never saw an apple.

The dispute has aspects fully as deep as the question, "Is there a Santa Claus?"

William Atherton, Deputy, writer of children's school books, says he thinks it is wrong to "mislead" young minds with the apple story if the banana or orange was more correct. He is going to change the story in the next series of books he writes. The work of salvaging the plane. It was brought near to the tanker—and then came the final tragedy.

As it was being salvaged in the tossing seas, a tank of gasoline exploded. In a moment the plane, which had carried the two so far, was burning, and before their eyes it was destroyed.

The rugged fare of a "tramp" oil tanker, was shared with Miss Elder and Haldeman and they were given rest.

The plane lost, there was nothing to do but go on and the Barendrecht headed towards Horta, chief port of the Azores Islands.

Captain Goos, Friday, informed the ship's owners at Amsterdam that he would land Miss Elder and Haldeman at Horta, early Saturday. Plans are being made at Horta to put the couple on the steamer Lima, which will take them to Lisbon on Sunday. That is the story told by the radio.

PUMPKIN DISPLAY
The square between Pinckney and High streets on Court, will be given over to the display of pumpkins and squashes. The display will extend to both sides of the street and R. L. Brehmer, chairman of this display, promises that every pumpkin, squash or freak vegetable brought in will be displayed. A new item on the premium list this year is the freak vegetables and very generous prizes have been awarded. The prize for the largest display of pumpkins and squashes has been raised this year to $50 in order to remunerate the owner for his work of getting the display to the show. Another item of interest to the exhibitor is that of a separate display and separate premium award for the crooked-neck squash, which heretofore has not received much attention.

Not Parental Models
The biological survey says that the males of some shore birds, among which are the Phalaropes, incubate the eggs and care for the young. The cowbird and the coo-coo of Europe lay their eggs in the nests of other birds, neither of the parents hatching them.

Wrote Fables That Live
Aesop was a famous Grecian fabulist, who lived about the middle of the Sixth century B. C. His fables were probably delivered orally and written down later by his admirers. Many have come down to the present time, and are applicable to conditions of modern life.

Marking Passage of Time
It was the first day of school and Gordon, who is now in the second grade, brought his little brother, Arthur, to school with him to start in the first grade. The teacher said to Gordon: "How old is Arthur?" Gordon answered: "I don't know, but we've had him to three fairs."

Not Parental Models
The biological survey says that the males of some shore birds, among which are the Phalaropes, incubate the eggs and care for the young. The cowbird and the coo-coo of Europe lay their eggs in the nests of other birds, neither of the parents hatching them.

Wrote Fables That Live
Aesop was a famous Grecian fabulist, who lived about the middle of the Sixth century B. C. His fables were probably delivered orally and written down later by his admirers. Many have come down to the present time, and are applicable to conditions of modern life.

Marking Passage of Time
It was the first day of school and Gordon, who is now in the second grade, brought his little brother, Arthur, to school with him to start in the first grade. The teacher said to Gordon: "How old is Arthur?" Gordon answered: "I don't know, but we've had him to three fairs."

A million women are wedded to the

Maytag
Aluminum Washer

A real partnership exists between a woman and her Maytag—a bond that grows stronger day by day.

A week's washing done in an hour. All garments washed clean without hand-rubbing—even cuffs and collars; a heat-retaining cast-aluminum tub, self-emptying and with adjustable legs; an automatic wringer; these and other features have brought to the Maytag a huge army of satisfied owners. A Million women—wedded to the Maytag—give ample testimony to the genuine worth of this washer.

FARM BUREAU EXHIBIT

The Pickaway County Farm Bureau has arranged an Exhibit for the Pumpkin Show to acquaint people with the services offered to farm people of this County through this organization.

The exhibit will be housed in a tent on East Main street and will be comprised of the following exhibits: The European Corn Borer, showing the life history of this insect and the damages wrought by it in the infested areas in Ohio and other States.

A Soils Exhibit based upon the results of the Soils Testing Clinic, will give a classification of Pickaway soil types. The type of treatment necessary to give most economical results in the average Pickaway County cropping system.

The third exhibit will be a set up of the various services and the correlation of these services which are offered to Pickaway County folks through the Farm Bureau organization.

All visitors to the Pumpkin Show should take the opportunity to visit these exhibits because a practical application of the messages carried in this exhibit

Foresees Bottle-Fed Nation

There is danger of bottle-feeding becoming a craze, declared Dr. A. F.
 G. Sparks, a prominent English doctor, at a recent maternity and child welfare conference at Newcastle-on-Tyne, England. Unless bottle-feeding for infants is checked, he said, the nation would become bottle-fed with consequent loss in efficiency. His remarks were confirmed by other medical men. The sheriff of Newcastle suggested that welfare centers teach fathers how to keep babies asleep at night.

Fruition of Dreams

AMUSEMENTS GALORE.

The amusement section of which T.
 D. Krinn is chairman, will have some unusual free entertainments at the Pumpkin Show next week, among them being the following attractions and their locations:

June Sisters, in a high dive, at the court house.

The Clark musical family, Main and Pickaway street.

Jesse Sines, bicycle act, Main and Scioto streets.

LeRoy, pony, dog and monkey acts,
 Main and Scioto street.

Claude & Frank, Spanish trouba-dores, in auto tent, Pinkney street.

The Seldens' artistic equilibrist, double trapeze performance, Court and High.

Tweedy Brothers, violin and piano musical act, Court and Pinkney streets.

The King trio, syncopation Jazz music, banjo and saxophone, all over the Pumpkin Show section in the bus iness district.

The bands which Mr. Krinn has secured are the Yellowbud band for the entire four days of the show and in addition, the Lancaster band,
 Thursday, October 20; Laurelville band, Friday; Adelphi K. of P. band, Saturday.

The paid amusement riding devices of Mr. Ehring of Columbus, will be here again this season and he will bring the following: The Merry-go Round, the Ferris wheel, the Kiddy airplane, the whip and the mixup.
 Negotiations are now in progress for two or more airplanes, who will if they come, perform aerial stunts.

SHE COULDN'T MISS IT

"My wife," said Brown, "has a terrible memory. She simply forgets everything."
 "Well," remarked Jones, "mine used to be that way, but I found a way to cure her."

"How was that?"

"If there is something I am anxious for her to know and remember I write it on a card and put the card in my trousers pocket."

No Interest in Life

Husband (anxiously) — My wife seems not to have the slightest interest in life.

Doctor — What makes you think that?

Husband — Well, I've tried her with golf, billiards, football and racing, and it's just like talking to a stone. — Montreal Star.

CAPABLE AND UP-TO-DATE

"Is the gardener's daughter capable and up-to-date?"
 "I'll say she is—hoes her own row and knows how to handle a rake."

Paging Inventors

I wish that I could find the man
 Who would invent and sell
 An onion with an onion taste
 But not an onion smell.

Saved!

He—Will you be my partner—
 She—Oh, George, this is so sudden!
 Give me a little time—
 He (continuing)—for the next dance?
 She (continuing) To catch my breath. I haven't recovered from the last fox-trot yet. — Pathfinder Magazine.

A Bit of a Load

Marjorie (to young man recently introduced)—You're a musician, aren't you? Well, come with us on our canoeing trip tomorrow and bring your instrument.

Young Man—Thanks, but I'm warning you—I play the pipe organ. — Boston Transcript.

Appropriate Time

Tombstone Dealer (after several futile suggestions)—How would just a simple "Gone Home" do for an inscription?
 The Widow—I guess that will be all right. It was always the last place he ever thought of going.

A HARD GUY

She—You're no longer friendly with Mr. Stone, then?
 He—No, he's a hard guy.

An Empty Dream

"Tell me not in mournful numbers Life is but an empty dream."
 When the catfish bite like thunder
 As I fish the sparkling stream.

Her Viewpoint

Mistress—Look, cook—this is the new evening dress I bought in town this afternoon—I think I'll wear it tonight.

Cook (preparing the dinner)—H'm,
 it's very nice, but it'll hardly go well with 'ashed mutton, will it?

A Substitute

Flub—This paper says that we will send artillery to China to batter down their wall.

Dubb—Good, I'm glad that this time the politicians are going to use their heads. — Vancouver Province.

Brute!

Mrs. Gregg—Oh, Harry, a strange man tried to flirt with me this morning.

Gregg—He was a strange man, all right.

Hard to See

Duffer—There's a good point to all jokes. I don't see why you can't see them.
 Ruffer—Yeh, they all have a point,
 but it's drawn into infinity.

A Daring Girl

Betty—Did you see the bird on the leg of that tree?
 Merand—Don't say leg. Say limb.
 Betty—Oh, I'm no prude.

His Discovery

Kerzog—I found out this morning that four of my most devoted friends were broke.

Zigzag—How did you find out?
 Kerzog—Oh, I tried to borrow a few dollars, you know. — New Bedford Standard.

Just the Same

"You're suffering from indigestion.
 Drink a cup of hot water every morning."

"I've been doing that for some time, doctor, only my wife calls it coffee." — Answers.

What may the engaged man
 give to his fiancée?

THE WHAT, WHEN AND HOW
 OF REMEMBRANCES... DON'T GUESS—ASK YOUR JEWELER

An engagement ring, of course!
 But what else, during the engagement period may an engaged man give to his fiancée —with propriety
 and good taste?

This is one of the many puzzling problems in the delicate and intricate art of proper gift-giving.

Certain kinds of gifts, including all forms of jewelry,
 the engaged man
 may bestow upon his bride-to-be as freely as his means
 and wish sanction.
 Other types of gifts,
 such as wearing apparel or furniture, he cannot give at all, without breaching the canons of approved social practice and good form.

But there are other equally perplexing questions in the etiquette of gift-giving. What, for example, should a bridegroom give to his best man and ushers before the wedding ceremony?
 And the bride to
 her brides-maids?
 What are the proper anniversary
 and seasonal gifts
 to friends and relatives?

When you have a delicate gift problem to solve—don't guess—go to an expert for authoritative counsel. See your jeweler. He is past-master in the science of gift selection. His consultations are free.

There is no finer gift than an Elgin Watch. Featured in a wide style variety and sold at prices ranging from $15 to $1700.

When a woman proposes

It was not leap year when Queen Victoria offered her heart and hand to Prince Albert, whom etiquette prevented from proposing to the queen of England, but Sir Robert Peel declared that his sovereign was "as full of love as Joliet," and the marriage which was solemnized in leap year, proved a union of perfect bliss.

What may the engaged man give to his fiancée?

THE WHAT, WHEN AND HOW OF REMEMBRANCES... DON'T GUESS—ASK YOUR JEWELER

An engagement ring, of course! But what else, during the engagement period may an engaged man give to his fiancée—with propriety and good taste?

This is one of the many puzzling problems in the delicate and intricate art of proper gift-giving.

Certain kinds of gifts, including all forms of jewelry, the engaged man may bestow upon his bride-to-be as freely as his means and wishes sanction. Other types of gifts, such as wearing apparel or furniture, he cannot give at all, without breaching the canons of approved social practice and good form.

But there are other equally perplexing questions in the etiquette of gift-giving. What, for example, should a bridegroom give to his best man and ushers before the wedding ceremony?

And the bride to her brides-maids? What are the proper anniversary and seasonal gifts to friends and relatives?

When you have a delicate gift problem to solve—don't guess—go to an expert for authoritative counsel. See your jeweler. He is past-master in the science of gift selection. His consultations are free.

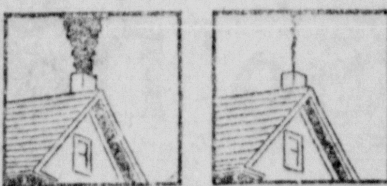

There is no finer gift than an Elgin Watch. Featured in a wide style variety and sold at prices ranging from $15 to $1700.

"I WAS going to say," Mr. Parfinkle's housekeeper lifted her chin, "I was going to say I was a bit sorry to quit your service, but being as you have called my intended a goat, my feelings have altered."
Parfinkle sighed. "Ellen," he said, "nobody in the United States can cook pancakes like you. I admire the quiet way you have of running about your duties, but as much as I treasure you as a housekeeper, I would not stand in the way of your happiness if I thought the man worthy. I repeat, Rufus Twigg is a goat and you'll live to see it."

"I gave notice for two weeks from today and I stay by what I said. If it hadn't been I'd worked for you so long that I know how to take your peculiarities I'd quit on the minute. Rufus is no more of a goat than you are."

"Two weeks," said Parfinkle to himself when she had retired to the kitchen. "I have just two weeks to change her mind or show up Rufus in his true colors. Well, I'll have to start at once."

It may be said for Mr. Parfinkle that his thoughts were not altogether selfish. The whole town, except for Ellen, knew Rufus Twigg as a fat and indolent man who saw in Ellen a good cook and the possessor of a savings account. Rufus had been calling at the Parfinkle house for a year, had smoked the Parfinkle cigars and, at last, when the box was locked and Parfinkle had displayed frank enmity, had proposed.

"Mr. Twigg," Parfinkle started in on his campaign early next morning. "Is a man who eats a great deal. I have an idea he will demand that his wife spend most of her time in the kitchen and that the grocery bill will be high."

"There is nothing I like better than cooking," the housekeeper replied. "and nothing I see through easier than your tricks."

Parfinkle checked off the first attempt as a failure and was more careful with the second.

"Ellen, you are a trusting girl," he began, noting the response given the designation, "just the sort who could be fooled by a designing man." He lowered his voice and tried to speak as a father. "Have you never noticed that Rufus is wild? He stays out nights, he . . . But Ellen laughed. "If Rufus is wild," she observed, "I'll tame him. And I may add without meaning impertinence, that you are not coming up to my expectations. Very clumsy and crude. I call it, trying to belittle a man like Rufus behind his back."

Parfinkle knew she was right. He had gone at this thing wrong from the start. Because this woman had respected his opinion in the past, it did not follow she would listen when Rufus was concerned. He would have to find another way.

The next day Parfinkle was humble and resigned. "I have decided," he said, "that I am getting old and crabbed. You will notice the cigar box is no longer locked. Invite your friend to call in my library. I will make amends and some day, who knows? after you are married you may invite me over for a feast of your pancakes." Parfinkle looked sad and Ellen beamed.

"There, now," she said, "you are talking like the regular gentleman what I know you are."

That evening when Rufus arrived to pay court within reach of the Parfinkle cigars, he found Parfinkle setting up a stereopticon.

"Just a minute," Parfinkle said, "I have a new purchase here and some interesting slides. I will bother you but a moment, but I'd like you and Ellen to see these pictures."

He hung a sheet on the wall, pointed the lantern, arranged seats for his audience, and turned off the lights. The lantern threw a shaft of light across the room while Parfinkle, altering the focus, made the bright circle on the sheet expand and contract. There were but a few pictures, then he turned the lantern, throwing the beam fair upon the face of Rufus.

It was a fat face, bald at the top and peaked at the chin, with a sparse and pointed beard. Rufus faced the lantern, blinked and turned away so his profile was mercilessly in view. The light pierced the pointed beard and showed the outline of face beneath. Parfinkle turned out the lantern, clicked on the lights, and departed.

Next morning Ellen served pancakes for the first time since the argument had started. Parfinkle knew there was something on her mind and was content to wait.

"You think you're smart," said Ellen, "and I guess you are. Anyway you won on your last card. I'd never marry a man with a chin like that and I guess you knew it."

"Ellen," said Parfinkle blandly, "these are the best pancakes I ever ate."

Devotion to Duty
"What do you regard as the highest duty of a statesman?"
"To serve his country," answered Senator Sorghum, "and incidentally to keep getting re-elected, so that his country will not lose the benefit of his services."

AMUSEMENTS

William Haines in golf tricks plus a series of hilarious troubles, Joan Crawford as a golfing debutante, and a love story that's told in the mazes of golf club etiquette and the game itself—these are the high-lights of "Spring Fever" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's comedy of the links, now playing at the Met theater.

The new picture is a decided novelty in production; in the first place, almost all of it was made outdoors, on the links of a famous country club and many nique expedients were necessary in filming, in a technically correct manner, trick golf shots, the technical details of different moves in the game and other material that was worked out by cameramen and golf experts to make this phase of the picture authentic.

Primarily, however, the picture is broad comedy. Haines plays a young shipping clerk whose prowess attracts the attention of his boss who happens to be a golfer. He's taken to a country club as a young millionaire whereupon his trials and tribulations begin with a comical intensity. He has more troubles to the square inch than Lindbergh has medals. Every fresh complication is a gale of laughter.

The cast is a notable one. Joan Crawford, heroine of "The Taxi Dancer," and other recent features, plays the principal feminine role, and George Fawcett, Edward Earle, G. K. Arthur, Lee Moran, Bert Woodruff, Eileen Percy and others of note are in the supporting cast.

Edward Sedgwick, who directed "Slide Kelly Slide" in which Haines was also starred, has directed "Spring Fever" with that self-same skill which has distinguished his every picture, and which made of the baseball production so notable a contribution to screen history. Even greater popularity is predicted on all sides for his new comedy epic of the golf course.

Beetle Ruins Beams in Castle of William I.

Maidstone, Eng.—The death watch beetle has ruined the wonderful oak beams, hewn in the days of William the Conqueror, in Leeds castle, now being restored.

History is being vivisected every day with pick and shovel in order that the interior of the castle near here may be rebuilt in its medieval form for its new owner, Arthur Wilson-Filmer. The cost of the work is estimated at $500,000.

The castle is built on three islands and connected by stone bridges, from one of which Edward II, hanged a former governor, Thomas de Colepeper.

Mr. Wilson-Filmer does not want the work hampered by crowds of sightseers. When the restoration is completed he and his wife, who is a daughter of Lord Queensborough, will live there.

Among the discoveries is a hidden torture chamber in the walls, with an oubliette in its stone floor, through which the body of the victim could be shot into the moat after the rack and thumbscrew had finished with him.

The castle and estate, which were bought some months ago from Fairfax Wykeham-Martin, whose family had owned it for centuries, are believed to have changed hands at $850,000.

Mr. Wilson-Filmer does not want the work hampered by crowds of sightseers. When the restoration is completed he and his wife, who is a daughter of Lord Queensborough, will live there.

Among the discoveries is a hidden torture chamber in the walls, with an oblique in its stone floor, through which the body of the victim could be shot into the moat after the rack and thumbscrew had finished with him.

The castle and estate, which were bought some months ago from Fairfax Wykeham-Martin, whose family had owned it for centuries, are believed to have changed hands at $850,000.

OUR DEALING WITH FRANCE

France's tariff action is increasingly embarrassing. She buys more from us than we do from her; she can hurt our trade, therefore, more than we can hurt hers. Furthermore, she has imposed 400 per cent raises and the best we can do is to fight back with a 50 per cent jump. If we should go on to embargo she would merely buy her oil from England instead of America and her cotton via England or Dutch hands.

France has had an almost devilish cunning in devising this assault upon us. It is thoroughly ironic that she should be thus penalizing the nation she prayed for in 1917 and simultaneously helping the restoration of the industrial health which she then vowed Germany must never be allowed to recover. Probably the republic is led to this sudden attack upon us by her constant squirmings to escape payment of her war debts to us.

We should keep firm in our intention to make every friendly effort to settle the tariff difficulty. If France is intransigent we should use our wits to devise a way to bring an equally acute pressure upon her. We always have up our sleeve the tourist embargo—hard to enforce but absolutely devastating. — New York Post.

HAM AND EGGS

Two men went into a restaurant for breakfast. One of them gave the negro waiter an order for ham and eggs. The other man told him to duplicate the order but eliminate the eggs. The waiter went back to the negro cook in the kitchen and gave him the order. Presently he came back to the patron and said, "Cap, how you said you want dem eggs?"

The man repeated the order, and the waiter went back to the kitchen with a puzzled look on his face. Presently he returned again and said, "Cap, can't you hab dem eggs fried?"

The man again repeated the order and the waiter again went to the kitchen. Presently he returned and said, "Sorry, cap'n, but we can't eliminate dem eggs, ca'se de 'liminator jus' fell offen de table en' bust de handle offen it."

Some One at the Door

"It sounds as if some one was coming for lunch," said Mrs. Maude Scofield, San Francisco woman, to her husband, as she started to the door. The guest was a big steam roller. It had run wild three blocks down a hill to the Scofield home, and finding the door not open, the guest smashed the front of the house, splintered a partition, knocked down the hostess, and almost demolished the place. There may have been a time when home was a safe place, but that was before man began scooting around in seven-ton trucks and three-ton airplanes.—Capper's Weekly.

THE public thinks of such trains as the "Century" and the "Chief" as being fast. They are.

But it requires over 65,600 minutes for 45 of the world's fastest trains, going in all directions from Chicago, to run 40,000 miles. And these trains get MANY fresh engines, at regular intervals, in order to make this remarkable speed.

Contrast this phenomenal performance of three Auburn fully equipped STOCK cars that ran 42,000 miles in less than 40,435 minutes (exact duplicates in every way of the Auburn cars every Auburn dealer has).

Here is an amazing record of performance, endurance and value never before approached, let alone equalled.

No change of engines for these three stock cars. No favoritism, but the hardest kind of driving, continuously, under American Automobile Association official supervision, on the Atlantic City Speedway.

To even RUN 42,000 continuous miles, at much less speed, would be a tremendous tribute to ANY automobile's efficiency and stamina. That is farther mileage and infinitely harder punishment than any three average private owners impose on their cars in a whole year's service.

But no other car has ever survived an official test of this magnitude and distance. Three Auburn cars DID it, at speeds that overwhelmingly break all records.

Not only that, but we KNOW that Auburn cars can go much farther at even FASTER speed.

The purpose of this test was not speed, altho that is sensational and establishes Auburn supreme in this respect.

The real purpose was to prove in the acid test of this proving grounds that Auburn cars ARE better designed, better built, more efficient, and more durable.

In these highly competitive days of extravagant claims, the public is entitled to the unvarnished truth about the relative value of motor cars.

It is what a car DOES and not what its builders SAY that determines VALUE.

When Pets Are Named

We have no longer with us Rover, Tray and Jet. Even Dickie, the canary, has passed into history. Dogs, cats, birds, horses and monkeys are known today by the family's favorite character in a comic strip, or on the screen, without regard to sex or characteristics. The business girl who goes through a weekly round of pictured persecutions, which she nobly resists, is immortalized in one family by having a namesake in a police dog whose sex and fierce disposition may not fit in with his name.

In families where the children have reached the film age the pets are called Gloria, Douglas, Tom Mix and Mary Pickford. A cat which recently presented its proud child-owner with seven kittens has in all of its nine lives answered to the name of Harold Lloyd.—New York Herald-Tribune.

FARM BUREAU PARADE

The Farm Bureau will be comprised of a Boys' and Girls' Parade, and a parade prepared by the Pickaway County Cream Association, Pickaway Grain Company, Pickaway Livestock Association, Automobile Insurance, and the Pickaway County Farm Bureau with the Board of Directors of each of these agencies in line.

The parade will assemble in Mound street, and will start at 2:10 o'clock Friday afternoon, October 21st.

The parade will take the following course: North on Court, from Mound to Pinckney, west to Scioto, south to Main, east on Main to Pickaway, thence south to Mound and starting point.

DRIVE TO GET CASH FOR THE STATE LIBRARY

(By Hal W. Conely.)

If Governor Donahey calls a special session of the General Assembly in January, as he has indicated he intends to do, a concerted effort is going to be made to have him ask the legislators to pass new appropriation measures for purposes for which he vetoed funds provided at the regular session.

Farm organizations throughout the state are already asking that the $500,000 item for bovine tuberculosis eradication in 1928, appropriated for the Department of Agriculture and vetoed by Donahey, be replaced.

Dairy farmers and stock men in northern Ohio, it is claimed, will suffer tremendous financial loss if the eradication work is stopped during the year. Donahey allowed to stand in the appropriation bill $300,000 for this purpose during the period from July 1 to Dec. 31, 1927.

Demand also is coming from the rural districts for re-appropriation of the $500,000 item for secondary highways vetoed by the governor in the original appropriation measure.

Effort will also be made to have the governor request that financial provision be made for the maintenance of the State Library. He vetoed the $126,000 appropriation made for the library, which has since failed to function, although the board of trustees appointed a new librarian and represented that the library service would be continued.

Besides these major items, pressure will be brought to bear from almost every state department to have funds appropriated for communications and travel expenses for 1928.

The governor vetoed the majority of the appropriations for these purposes, although he let similar items stand for the last six months of 1927.

Heads of many of the state departments contend their work will be crippled materially unless funds are made available for them at a special session, Atty. Gen. Edward C. Turner having ruled that money from other funds cannot be transferred for these purposes and that the State Emergency Board is without authority to grant deficiency appropriations under such circumstances.

There is a possibility, although a remote one, that Turner through an opinion on an issue by the Public Utilities Commission, may yet solve the problem for the state departments and for the farmers interested in the bovine tuberculosis eradication.

The Utilities Commission has asked him for a ruling whether Governor Donahey could legally veto an appropriation for a specific purpose for part of the biennium and let the appropriation for the same purpose stand for the rest of the period.

The constitution provides that the governor may veto any item or items in the appropriation measures. Question raised by the commission is whether Donahey's disapproval of travel expense appropriations for one period and approving similar appropriations for the rest of the biennium did not constitute veto of only part of the "item" as appropriated by the Legislature.

Argument has been advanced that where the Legislature appropriated $2,500 for travel expense for a department during 1927 and $5,000 for travel expense during 1928, the governor could not legally veto the $5,000 appropriation without also disapproving the $2,500. In other words, that the "item" was $7,500 and that Donahey had to veto all or none of this total.

Turner is expected to submit his opinion on this question some time next week.—Columbus Citizen.

Views of of the Stars

People in the southern hemisphere see different stars, but there are some constellations which are visible at different times of the year in both hemispheres. If the earth's axis kept always perpendicular to the plane of its orbit none of the northern constellations would ever be seen in the southern hemisphere, but as the axis inclines first one way and then the other, some, or both sets can be seen at different times.

We have no longer with us Rover, Tray and Jet. Even Dickie, the canary, has passed into history. Dogs, cats, birds, horses and monkeys are known today by the family's favorite character in a comic strip, or on the screen, without regard to sex or characteristics. The business girl who goes through a weekly round of pictured persecutions, which she nobly resists, is immortalized in one family by having a namesake in a police dog whose sex and fierce disposition may not fit in with his name.

In families where the children have reached the film age the pets are called Gloria, Douglas, Tom Mix and Mary Pickford. A cat which recently presented its proud child-owner with seven kittens has in all of its nine lives answered to the name of Harold Lloyd.—New York Herald-Tribune.

DRIVE TO GET CASH FOR THE STATE LIBRARY

(By Hal W. Conely.)

If Governor Donahey calls a special session of the General Assembly in January, as he has indicated he intends to do, a concerted effort is going to be made to have him ask the legislators to pass new appropriation measures for purposes for which he vetoed funds provided at the regular session.

Farm organizations throughout the state are already asking that the $500,000 item for bovine tuberculosis eradication in 1928, appropriated for the Department of Agriculture and vetoed by Donahey, be replaced.

Dairy farmers and stock men in northern Ohio, it is claimed, will suffer tremendous financial loss if the eradication work is stopped during the year. Donahey allowed to stand in the appropriation bill $300,000 for this purpose during the period from July 1 to Dec. 31, 1927.

Demand also is coming from the rural districts for re-appropriation of the $500,000 item for secondary highways vetoed by the governor in the original appropriation measure.

Taxes already have been collected in the counties, it is contended, for their part of the secondary highway system work and the state should provide its portion in accord with the intent of the original Green law creating this system.

Effort will also be made to have the governor request that financial provision be made for the maintenance of the State Library. He vetoed the $126,000 appropriation made for the library, which has since failed to function, although the board of trustees appointed a new librarian and represented that the library service would be continued.

Besides these major items, pressure will be brought to bear from almost every state department to have funds appropriated for communications and travel expenses for 1928.

The governor vetoed the majority of the appropriations for these purposes, although he let similar items stand for the last six months of 1927.

Heads of many of the state departments contend their work will be crippled materially unless funds are made available for them at a special session, Atty. Gen. Edward C. Turner having ruled that money from other funds cannot be transferred for these purposes and that the State Emergency Board is without authority to grant deficiency appropriations under such circumstances.

There is a possibility, although a remote one, that Turner through an opinion on an issue by the Public Utilities Commission, may yet solve the problem for the state departments and for the farmers interested in the bovine tuberculosis eradication.

The Utilities Commission has asked him for a ruling whether Governor Donahey could legally veto an appropriation for a specific purpose for part of the biennium and let the appropriation for the same purpose stand for the rest of the period.

The constitution provides that the governor may veto any item or items in the appropriation measures. Question raised by the commission is whether Donahey's disapproval of travel expense appropriations for one period and approving similar appropriations for the rest of the biennium did not constitute veto of only part of the "item" as appropriated by the Legislature.

Argument has been advanced that where the Legislature appropriated $2,500 for travel expense for a department during 1927 and $5,000 for travel expense during 1928, the governor could not legally veto the $5,000 appropriation without also disapproving the $2,500. Lost on the Trail

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

MADGE sat on a fallen log trying to recall just exactly what you were supposed to do when lost in the woods.

All she had remembered so far was that one should sit down quietly somewhere and collect one's thoughts, and this she had done, picking out as comfortable a seat as possible in the tangle of juniper, raspberry bushes, ferns, and what not, that matted this particular section of the Lone Trail mountain's southern slope. Madge was not quite sure about that. And that was the trouble.

If it was the southern slope, it must face the lake and, sooner or later, if she kept on going down, she would reach the shore and, by following the shore, she was bound to reach the hotel.

She had wandered off into the woods to make up her mind regarding a tall, sun-browned young man whom she had seen but three times. Once on the hotel veranda in conversation, once in the little summer post office where the elderly postmistress had introduced them, and the third time on that memorable occasion when he had happened along in a canoe in Shadowy bay where she had been reading and where, for an hour, they had sat talking, their canoes side by side.

It was useless to deny that there was some subtle attraction for her in the young forest ranger. It had been distinctly a pleasure to learn that his birth and education had been as unimpeachable as her own. And considerably better than those of the millionaire she was contemplating marrying.

But now that she was lost, she had something else to do than to toy with the possibility of counting wealth well lost for love. She must endeavor to find her way before darkness settled. She would not be missed at the hotel until that time and, even then, nobody would be able to tell in which direction she had strayed.

She looked up through the trees toward the peak of the mountain. If she could only climb a little higher and get a view through the trees of the lake, she would have some idea which way to work. By continuing to descend, she might find herself in some terrible ravine quite on the other side.

She rose and started to ascend, carefully breaking twigs here and there in what she considered approved woodcraft fashion.

Suddenly she stopped short and drew in a quick little breath. Smoke! The acrid tang of burning wood. Just a whiff that vanished all at once and did not return. But it was enough to alarm her immeasurably, and instinctively she plunged on the more frantically upward as if the bare knoll could offer protection from that red plague of the woods.

A break in the wall of foliage ahead told her she was already nearing her goal. A dozen more steps—half a dozen.

She shrank back into the depths of the woods again, her hand at her throat. On the nearer side of the knoll a man bent over a fire. It had been the smoke of that fire which she had smelled and the man who was evidently cooking his supper was Jack Marbury.

He spoke, without turning around. "Don't turn back, Miss Madge. I happened to see you on the trail and came on ahead to get a little supper ready for you."

Madge, her lovely face swept with blushes, stepped forward slowly. "How—how could you possibly have seen me? I was lost—miles from the trail."

"Not all the time. I hesitated about letting you know I was near, but something told me you were trying to reach this spot and it seemed better, somehow, to wait until you came out in the opening before speaking to you. Happened to have my emergency rations with me and—well, if you think you can manage a meal on six strips of bacon and a mug of coffee, we'll have a little spread."

Madge curled up on the rock above him. She had been right about the view. There below, far down, lay the clear waters of the lake, its scattered islands ringed with the green of surrounding shallows. Beyond stretched a jumbled mass of peaks.

"You're probably wondering how I happened to be over this way," continued the man in a matter-of-fact manner. "As it chanced, I was on my way to see you. You have a right to know, I guess, that I love you as I could love no other woman. Yes, I think you have a right, even if you only want to reject my love. And, anyhow, I just had to tell you."

Madge lifted her gray eyes to the soft sky above her. Then her glance swept the glorious panorama of forest and lake and distant hills. "Oh—" she said, half breathlessly.

A sudden conception of the choice that was being offered her swept over her. A five-course dinner in the hotel below for the rest of her life in the company of a middle-aged gentleman of portly build or bacon and coffee on the top of the world with Jack. What girl of any sense would think of hesitating?

Madge didn't. She held out both hands to the man looking at her so wistfully. "Oh—" she said, "I've found so much more than my way this afternoon on Lone Trail mountain!"

BATTLE ON OVER OLD CEMETERY

Court Order Forbids Use of Historic Ground as Pasture.

Valparaiso, Ind.—Historic Baillytown, nestled in Westchester township, on the southern edge of the old Calumet river bottom in the dune region of Porter county, once the stamping ground of friendly Indian tribes, now is the battleground for what appears to be a long and bitter fight.

Desecration of the now famous Baillytown cemetery, wherein lie the bones of Joseph Bailly, grizzled pioneer and founder of the town which bears his name, has resulted in 24 citizens filing injunction proceedings in the Porter Circuit court here.

Carl, John and Ansonia Danielson are the targets for the legal attack launched by the plaintiffs. The Danielsons, it is charged, have permitted cattle to roam about the cemetery, turning the heretofore sacred ground into a pasture. Members of the tiny community, who staunchly believe that the three-acre plot should forever be preserved, are up in arms and have announced their intention of battling to the finish. And Baillytown, a usually tranquil place, is buzzing with excitement.

While the war rages, Judge Grant Crumacker has granted a temporary restraining order without notice and thereby gained a point for the complaining faction. James J. McGarvey, youngest member of the Porter county bar and a deputy prosecuting attorney, has carried the colors of the plaintiffs before Judge Crumacker.

Site of First Settlement.

Westchester township is the historic ground of Porter county. Here the first settlement was made and here civilized man and savage joined hands and trod together the paths of peace.

In 1822 a solitary white man was watched closely by Indian eyes as he wended his weary way through the wilderness around Lake Michigan. He walked without fear, for the Indians knew him as a friend. Safety and warm welcome were ahead, while long miles lay behind him toward his white friends.

During the War of 1812 this man was taken prisoner by both the American and British forces, but failed to enlist in either army. In his wanderings he sought safety, and opportunity to trade, with friendly Indians.

As the Indians gradually dwindled away with the advent of the white men Joseph Bailly, the French Canadian trader, followed. He halted in 1822 on the north bank of the Calumet, in what is now Porter county. Upon a beautiful bluff he erected the first cabin in the region. Bailly bartered with the Indians and his business increased and his buildings multiplied.

Weds Indian Girl.

Meantime Bailly had wooed and won an Ottawa maid and brought his bride to dwell at the post on the banks of the Calumet. Here they reared a family of four daughters. Eleanor, the oldest for several years was mother superior of St. Mary's in Terre Haute. The second daughter married Colonel Whistler, a resident of the county, and the third wed a Chicago banker by the name of Howe. Hortense, the youngest, became the bride of Joseph Wicker, the first merchant of Deep river in Lake county. Besides the daughters a son was born to the Baillys in 1817 and died ten years later.

When Bailly buried his only son, a lad of ten years, in 1827, he erected a huge oak cross, 30 feet in height, to his memory. The cross rose high above the surrounding forest, inasmuch as it rested on a knoll. For years travelers and mail carriers used this cross as a guide.

On the cross was the following inscription: "Today, my turn; tomorrow, yours;" and also "Jesus Christ crucified, have mercy upon us."

The father himself passed away in 1835, after being for almost ten years the only white settler in what is now Westchester township. Baillytown cemetery holds the remains of its founder, his son, his granddaughter, Frances Howe, and members of an extinct tribe of Indians.

Arthur J. Bowser, for many years a resident of Chesterton, Ind., who is at present making his home here, tells many interesting tales of Baillytown, now robed in tradition. Bowser, sixty-four, spent 47 years of his life as a newspaper man.

An elm and an oak tree still standing at Baillytown were planted together by Bailly and his Indian bride. If the trees entwined and lived, the Indian maid predicted their marriage would endure. Mr. Bowser compiled other data of interest during the many years he resided near Baillytown.

Even though the Danielsons purchased the three-acre strip, including the cemetery, from Emma C. Huston, daughter of Mrs. Howe, and her husband, James L. Huston, now residents of Los Angeles, the irate citizens contend that they haven't the right to desecrate the graves.

AN ANNUAL EVENT.

Circleville is getting all dressed up for its Pumpkin Ship the last four days of this week. The Watchman assures us that the show will be bigger and better this year, and that is as it should be.

It is a splendid thing for every town to maintain some annual event, which in the course of years becomes an institution. It accumulates a significance that is not attained by any sporadic activity, no matter how elaborate. In addition to the entertainment it offers it affords the occasion for the annual homecoming and every community should have something of that sort.

Ever and anon someone recalls what an enjoyable affair Portsmouth's corn carnival used to be and wishes it could be revived. There appears no real reason why it could not be revived. The conditions which led to its being dropped no longer exist. Portsmouth of today could stage a corn carnival that would eclipse even the splendid and happily remembered exploits of some years ago.

The last few years have seen a general revival of interest in county fairs and carnivals—meaning real carnivals and not side street fairs. Conditions appear to be ripe for Portsmouth to revive its corn carnival next fall and then keep it a permanent annual event, a real fall festival and homecoming.

It is none too soon to begin thinking about it. If such an affair is adequately staged preparations should begin a year in advance, not just a few weeks before the event. The chamber of commerce did so splendidly with the bridge celebration on short notice that it is fair to assume that should it turn its hand toward arranging for a corn carnival next fall the results would be notable.

If a city is to reach its greatest possibilities commercially it must serve as an entertainment center as well as a trading center. Developing a really worth while fall festival for Portsmouth would do much to cultivate that cordial feeling of good will throughout the district that is one of the city's greatest assets.—Portsmouth Times.

Blonde or Brunette

A Missouri preacher who has married more than 4,000 couples during his pulp career mentions the circumstances that the brunette brides take their union rather more seriously than the other types. The red-headed girl comes up to the altar with the best of a sportsman. She wants to show you what she has captured without describing the size of those that got away. But the pastor says that among the blonds there are very many dumb-bells. They do not seem to know what it is all about and few of them seem to care. But it must be understood that this is a Missouri record and may not apply so rigidly to the brides in other states. Out here the rumor that blonds are dumb has never gained much headway.—Los Angeles Times.

Pretty Emerald Legend

The loveliest butterflies have given rise to curious folk lore. In a famous collection is one wonderfully colored insect from Colombia, which is quite rare. It occurs throughout the emerald belt. According to the natives, when one of these insects dies it is buried under the earth and becomes an emerald.

Ended Witchcraft Mania

On August 10, 1922, five women were hanged at Salem, Mass., convicted by a special court of crime of "Witchcraft." The people lasted the spring and summer of that year and then there was a return to common sense.

Lost on the Trail

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD

(Copyright.)

MADGE sat on a fallen log trying to recall just exactly what you were supposed to do when lost in the woods.

All she had remembered so far was that one should sit down quietly somewhere and collect one's thoughts, and this she had done, picking out as comfortable a seat as possible in the tangle of juniper, raspberry bushes, ferns, and what not, that matted this particular section of the Lone Trail mountain's southern slope. Madge was not quite sure about that. And that was the trouble.

If it was the southern slope, it must face the lake and, sooner or later, if she kept on going down, she would reach the shore and, by following the shore, she was bound to reach the hotel.

She had wandered off into the woods to make up her mind regarding a tall, sun-browned young man whom she had seen but three times. Once on the hotel veranda in conversation, once in the little summer post office where the elderly postmistress had introduced them, and the third time on that memorable occasion when he had happened along in a canoe in Shadowy bay where she had been reading and where, for an hour, they had sat talking, their canoes side by side.

It was useless to deny that there was some subtle attraction for her in the young forest ranger. It had been distinctly a pleasure to learn that his birth and education had been as unimpeachable as her own. And considerably better than those of the millionaire she was contemplating marrying.

But now that she was lost, she had something else to do than to toy with the possibility of counting wealth well lost for love. She must endeavor to find her way before darkness settled. She would not be missed at the hotel until that time and, even then, nobody would be able to tell in which direction she had strayed.

She looked up through the trees toward the peak of the mountain. If she could only climb a little higher and get a view through the trees of the lake, she would have some idea which way to work. By continuing to descend, she might find herself in some terrible ravine quite on the other side.

She rose and started to ascend, carefully breaking twigs here and there in what she considered approved woodcraft fashion.

Suddenly she stopped short and drew in a quick little breath. Smoke! The acrid tang of burning wood. Just a whiff that vanished all at once and did not return. But it was enough to alarm her immeasurably, and instinctively she plunged on the more frantically upward as if the bare knoll could offer protection from that red plague of the woods.

A break in the wall of foliage ahead told her she was already nearing her goal. A dozen more steps—half a dozen.

She shrank back into the depths of the woods again, her hand at her throat. On the nearer side of the knoll a man bent over a fire. It had been the smoke of that fire which she had smelled and the man who was evidently cooking his supper was Jack Marbury.

He spoke, without turning around. "Don't turn back, Miss Madge. I happened to see you on the trail and came on ahead to get a little supper ready for you."

Madge, her lovely face swept with blushes, stepped forward slowly. "How—how could you possibly have seen me? I was lost—miles from the trail."

"Not all the time. I hesitated about letting you know I was near, but something told me you were trying to reach this spot and it seemed better, somehow, to wait until you came out in the opening before speaking to you. Happened to have my emergency rations with me and—well, if you think you can manage a meal on six strips of bacon and a mug of coffee, we'll have a little spread."

Madge curled up on the rock above him. She had been right about the view. There below, far down, lay the clear waters of the lake, its scattered islands ringed with the green of surrounding shallows. Beyond stretched a jumbled mass of peaks.

"You're probably wondering how I happened to be over this way," continued the man in a matter-of-fact manner. "As it chanced, I was on my way to see you. You have a right to know, I guess, that I love you as I could love no other woman. Yes, I think you have a right, even if you only want to reject my love. And, anyhow, I just had to tell you."

Madge lifted her gray eyes to the soft sky above her. Then her glance swept the glorious panorama of forest and lake and distant hills. "Oh—" she said, half breathlessly.

A sudden conception of the choice that was being offered her swept over her. A five-course dinner in the hotel below for the rest of her life in the company of a middle-aged gentleman of portly build or bacon and coffee on the top of the world with Jack. What girl of any sense would think of hesitating?

Madge didn't. She held out both hands to the man looking at her so wistfully. "Oh—" she said, "I've found so much more than my way this afternoon on Lone Trail mountain!"

BATTLE ON OVER OLD CEMETERY

Court Order Forbids Use of Historic Ground as Pasture.

Valparaiso, Ind.—Historic Baillytown, nestled in Westchester township, on the southern edge of the old Calumet river bottom in the dune region of Porter county, once the stamping ground of friendly Indian tribes, now is the battleground for what appears to be a long and bitter fight.

Desecration of the now famous Baillytown cemetery, wherein lie the bones of Joseph Bailly, grizzled pioneer and founder of the town which bears his name, has resulted in 24 citizens filing injunction proceedings in the Porter Circuit court here.

Carl John and Ansonia Danielson are the targets for the legal attack launched by the plaintiffs. The Danielsons, it is charged, have permitted cattle to roam about the cemetery, turning the heretofore sacred ground into a pasture. Members of the tiny community, who staunchly believe that the three-acre plot should forever be preserved, are up in arms and have announced their intention of battling to the finish. And Baillytown, a usually tranquil place, is buzzing with excitement.

While the war rages, Judge Grant Crumpacker has granted a temporary restraining order without notice and thereby gained a point for the complaining faction. James J. McGarvey, youngest member of the Porter county bar and a deputy prosecuting attorney, has carried the colors of the plaintiffs before Judge Crumpacker.

Site of First Settlement.

Westchester township is the historic ground of Porter county. Here the first settlement was made and here civilized man and savage joined hands and trod together the paths of peace.

In 1822 a solitary white man was watched closely by Indian eyes as he wended his weary way through the wilderness around Lake Michigan. He walked without fear, for the Indians knew him as a friend. Safety and warm welcome were ahead, while long miles lay behind him toward his white friends.

During the War of 1812 this man was taken prisoner by both the American and British forces, but failed to enlist in either army. In his wanderings he sought safety, and opportunity to trade, with friendly Indians.

As the Indians gradually dwindled away with the advent of the white men Joseph Bailly, the French Canadian trader, followed. He halted in 1822 on the north bank of the Calumet, in what is now Porter county. Upon a beautiful bluff he erected the first cabin in the region. Bailly bartered with the Indians and his business increased and his buildings multiplied.

Weds Indian Girl.

Meantime Bailly had wooed and won an Ottawa maid and brought his bride to dwell at the post on the banks of the Calumet. Here they reared a family of four daughters. Eleanor, the oldest for several years was mother superior of St. Mary's in Terre Haute. The second daughter married Colonel Whistler, a resident of the county, and the third wed a Chicago banker by the name of Howe. Horace, the youngest, became the bride of Joseph Wicker, the first merchant of Deep river in Lake county. Besides the daughters a son was born to the Baillys in 1817 and died ten years later.

When Bailly buried his only son, a lad of ten years, in 1827, he erected a huge oak cross, 30 feet in height, to his memory. The cross rose high above the surrounding forest, inasmuch as it rested on a knoll. For years travelers and mail carriers used this cross as a guide.

On the cross was the following inscription: "Today, my turn; tomorrow, yours;" and also "Jesus Christ crucified, have mercy upon us."

The father himself passed away in 1835, after being for almost ten years the only white settler in what is now Westchester township. Baillytown cemetery holds the remains of its founder, his son, his granddaughter, Frances Howe, and members of an extinct tribe of Indians.

Arthur J. Bowser, for many years a resident of Chesterton, Ind., who is at present making his home here, tells many interesting tales of Baillytown, now robed in tradition. Bowser, sixty-four, spent 47 years of his life as a newspaper man.

An elm and an oak tree still standing at Baillytown were planted together by Bailly and his Indian bride. If the trees entwined and lived, the Indian maid predicted their marriage would endure. Mr. Bowser compiled other data of interest during the many years he resided near Baillytown.

Even though the Danielsons purchased the three-acre strip, including the cemetery, from Emma C. Huston, daughter of Mrs. Howe, and her husband, James L. Huston, now residents of Los Angeles, the late citizens contend that they haven't the right to desecrate the graves.

AN ANNUAL EVENT.

Circleville is getting all dressed up for its Pumpkin Ship the last four days of this week. The Watchman assures us that the show will be bigger and better this year, and that is as it should be.

It is a splendid thing for every town to maintain some annual event, which in the course of years becomes an institution. It accumulates a significance that is not attained by any sporadic activity, no matter how elaborate. In addition to the entertainment it offers it affords the occasion for the annual homecoming and every community should have something of that sort.

Ever and anon someone recalls what an enjoyable affair Portsmouth's corn carnival used to be and wishes it could be revived. There appears no real reason why it could not be revived. The conditions which led to its being dropped no longer exist. Portsmouth of today could stage a corn carnival that would eclipse even the splendid and happily remembered exploits of some years ago.

The last few years have seen a general revival of interest in county fairs and carnivals—meaning real carnivals and not side street fairs. Conditions appear to be ripe for Portsmouth to revive its corn carnival next fall and then keep it a permanent annual event, a real fall festival and homecoming.

It is none too soon to begin thinking about it. If such an affair is adequately staged preparations should begin a year in advance, not just a few weeks before the event. The chamber of commerce did so splendidly with the bridge celebration on short notice that it is fair to assume that should it turn its hands toward arranging for a corn carnival next fall the results would be notable.

If a city is to reach its greatest possibilities commercially it must serve as an entertainment center as well as a trading center. Developing a really worth while fall festival for Portsmouth would do much to cultivate that cordial feeling of good will throughout the district that is one of the city's greatest assets.—Portsmouth Times.

Blonde or Brunette

A Missouri preacher who has married more than 4,000 couples during his pulpit career mentions the circumstances that the brunettes brides take their union rather more seriously than the other types. The red-headed girl comes up to the altar with the best of a sportsman. She wants to show you what she has captured without describing the size of those that got away. But the pastor says that among the blonds there are very many dumb-bells. They do not seem to know what it is all about and few of them seem to care. But it must be understood that this is a Missouri record and may not apply so rigidly to the brides in other states. Out here the rumor that blonds are dumb has never gained much headway.—Los Angeles Times.
